Most organizations today are understaffed and face high turnover. Direct care and administrative support staff must be engaged as full partners. Develop the skills to communicate directly with supervisors and negotiate for the resources, support, training, and equipment needed to do your job well...and reduce burnout. Help your supervisor supervise YOU!

Advocate for your ideas for constructive changes to policies that can be more employee-friendly and help reduce turnover. Support colleagues in sharing feedback and suggestions for improvements to practices and procedures that can work better for everyone. Help engage all staff voices in planning for shift coverage that meets the needs of employees and clients.
